

BERKELEY GLOBAL INTERNSHIPS

Haifa, Israel

Experience Israel's complexity and diversity in the coastal city of Haifa, Israel, and broaden your view of the Middle East.

Berkeley Global Internship participants will work in local nonprofits, public projects and grassroots organizations working in the fields of education, women's rights, immigration, and others. The program will be run in partnership with Yahel Israel, an Israeli nonprofit specializing in running service learning and social action programs in Israel, and The Helen Diller Institute for Jewish Law and Israel Studies.

Internships will be three to four days a week, with two days of the week consisting of program-related coursework and field trips. Internship opportunities may include:

- Curriculum Development in English
- Evaluation – assistance in ongoing data collection and analysis
- Resource development – including grant-writing, donor research, foundational research, assistance with fundraising campaigns etc.
- Media and marketing – creating website content, building websites, maintaining social media platforms, creating marketing materials in English and more.
- Assistance with program and event planning
- Assistance with local projects – second hand-store, projects with the elderly
- Community based research - community mapping
- Secondary research – research on methodologies from around the world that may apply to local work
- Direct English activities with children and youth
